

CLASSIFIED FILE: PROJECT CARRION

Project Carrion is a top secret operation funded by the British Military. The sole purpose of this venture is to develop smaller, intelligent alternatives to military drones currently in operation around the world. The UK military's objective is to produce advanced surveillance equipment with the discretion, stealth and adaptability of living animals to be deployed in hard to access locations around the globe.

It is the most sophisticated and ambitious tactic yet in the UK's fight against global terrorism. Solely funded by the UK, millions of pounds have been invested in this new technology, with plans to patent and sell it to allies in the East and West.

The animal cyborgs, fused with cutting edge military technology, will be primarily used to record and track the movements of terrorist organisations and factions that pose an immediate threat to national security, and our interests across the West. If the pilot project is successful, then more aggressive models will be created for combat operations abroad.
